"..... (Data from major journal sources were consulted up to July, 1983, data from all other sources up to April, 1983.) The general arrangement of the Chart is similar to that suggested by Emilio Segre and followed in previous editions. Because of its size, the Chart is presented in three overlapping sections. The numbers along the left-hand side, marking the horizontal row represents one element; the filled spaces indicate the known isotopes of that element. The numbers at the bottom of the vertical columns represent the number of neutrons in each nucleus of that column; the number is designated by N....." [from the book]
