Restore Together: Urban Ministry in the Context of Technology and Energy in the 21st Century Dr. Louis J. Hutchinson III
There is an all-out assault on the poor. And that assault is global, systemic, digital, immoral and effective. And the church, whose responsibility it is to advocate for the poor, is in a collective slumber. There is a Digital Secularization -- the immoral use of technology that exploits the people, systems, and the social and natural environment across the world -- in need of a humanizing, moral revolution. These factors and many others conjoin to make these very trying, desperate, and difficult times for the poor and especially the growing numbers of urban poor of all ethnic and racial groups. But there is now a post-modern church technology prophet to appear to awaken those who sleep! The great prophet of the poor of the last century, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., would be plenty proud of him and consider him in the same tradition of his Poor Peoples Campaign in Washington just prior to his death in 1968 (Rev. Dr. William B. McClain, Mary Elizabeth Joyce Professor of Preaching and Worship, Wesley Theological Seminary, Washington, DC). Louis Hutchinson comes along just in time to offer help. In this book he writes a sound sociological and scripture-based analysis, thoughtful theology, a deeply passionate love for the church and society, and a practical guidebook and project to foster a global digital ministry that calls for the collaboration of the church and the world for beneficial social change. And with clear and easy illustrations and demonstrations how technology can be pressed into service for the common good and with case studies showing the effectiveness of Restoring Community Together, we have the Internet as a prophetic voice. He helps the church to see how a digital ministry/platform community can use the Internet, laptops, desk tops, smart phones, iPods, iPads and other technology as tools that God has given us to benefit humankind across the world and all to the greater glory of God. It is time for the church to restore God's people together through a digital ministry/platform community (internet, desktop, laptop, smart-phone, etc.) that is dynamic, collaborative, multilingual and accessible to individuals with disabilities, while enhancing giving organizations gifts/resources, ability to provide holistic counseling, discipleship, sharing of best practices, and ability to organize community action. The Restore Together Community that is proposed in this book will allow giving and receiving of donations (for organizations only), gift cards, products (food, shelter, clothing), services (legal, accounting, marketing, construction, etc.), and commodity (electricity, power, gas, water, etc.) for organizations and individuals in need, globally. The financial profits from this community will be used to erase the digital/energy divide for the deeply impoverished by allowing people in collaborative communion to liberate each other through loving sacrifice and daily praxis.
