The Catbird Seat: A Novel Based on Historical Events Chris Wonnacott
In 1923 Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons were lured to Shelby, Montana, for the World Heavyweight Championship Fight. The ensuing match fleeced the small cattle and oil town in the middle of nowhere. Several banks collapsed and most businesses went into foreclosure. Only a mastermind could have perpetrated such a scheme. His name is "Knox Golden" Armstrong.

Knox has it all: a dream job, a wealthy fiancée, a future filled with promise. But beneath his Rudolph Valentino charm is a man motivated to avenge the murder of his father. When Red Damien, his future father-in-law and billionaire oil man, reveals a desire to capitalize on the Shelby, Montana, oil rights, Knox devises a plan that will satisfy Damien and annihilate all three men responsible for his father's death.

With another employee of Damien's already woven into the town's elite social circle, Knox leaves Detroit for Shelby. To a roundtable of shady business leaders—kept unaware of his true identity—Knox offers up the next Heavyweight Title Fight as a means to promote "the premiere city of the Northwest" and generate a million dollars in revenue.
As his plan unfolds, however, Knox is plunged into a world of corruption, greed, murder, and power. Suddenly, he finds himself threatened—by the men who killed his father, by the oilman who wants the mineral rights, and by the wickedness he seeks to destroy.
